The world is changing rapidly, and the skills that students need to succeed in the 21st century workforce are changing with it. In order to prepare students for the future, schools need to improve their curriculum and teaching methods to focus on developing 21st century skills, global citizenship, and deeper learning.

21st Century Skills

21st century skills are the skills that students need to succeed in the modern world. These skills include:

- Critical thinking and problem solving
- Creativity and innovation
- Collaboration and communication
- Information literacy and media literacy
- Technology literacy

Schools can develop these skills by providing students with opportunities to:

- Engage in problem-based learning
- Work in teams on projects
- Use technology to create and communicate
- Conduct research and evaluate information
- Solve real-world problems

Global Citizenship

Global citizenship is the ability to understand and interact with the world beyond one's own borders. In the 21st century, it is more important than ever for students to be able to think globally and act locally.

Schools can promote global citizenship by:

- Teaching about different cultures and perspectives
- Encouraging students to participate in global service projects

- Providing opportunities for students to travel and learn about other cultures
- Creating a diverse and inclusive school environment
- Partnering with organizations that promote global citizenship

Deeper Learning

Deeper learning is a student-centered approach to learning that emphasizes understanding and application of knowledge. Deeper learning experiences are designed to help students develop:

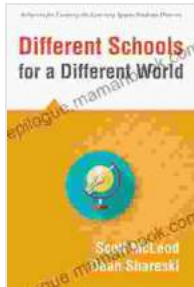

- Critical thinking skills
- Problem-solving skills
- Communication skills
- Collaboration skills
- Creativity
- Global competence

Schools can foster deeper learning by:

- Providing students with choice and autonomy in their learning
- Creating learning environments that are engaging and challenging
- Using authentic assessments that measure student understanding
- Providing opportunities for students to reflect on their learning
- Partnering with businesses and community organizations to provide real-world experiences
