Effective leaders know that success is not built on a foundation of grandiose ideas or elaborate plans. Instead, it's built on a bedrock of small, consistent actions that create a culture of trust, respect, and accountability.

Here are a few of the small things that great leaders do well:

1. They communicate effectively. Great leaders are able to clearly and concisely communicate their vision, goals, and expectations to their team. They listen attentively to feedback and are open to new ideas.
2. They are organized and efficient. Great leaders are able to manage their time and resources effectively. They are able to set priorities and delegate tasks appropriately.

3. They are positive and motivating. Great leaders are able to create a positive and motivating work environment. They are enthusiastic about their work and are able to inspire their team to achieve great things.
4. They are fair and consistent. Great leaders are fair and consistent in their dealings with their team. They treat everyone with respect and are not afraid to hold people accountable for their actions.
5. They are humble and approachable. Great leaders are not afraid to admit their mistakes and are always willing to learn from others. They are approachable and easy to talk to.

These are just a few of the small things that great leaders do well. By consistently ng these things, leaders can create a culture of trust, respect, and accountability that will lead to success.

Leadership is not about being the loudest or the flashiest person in the room. It's about being the one who consistently does the small things well. By ng so, leaders can create a positive and productive work environment that will lead to success.
